At a stated communication of Pulss-

It is impossible for human beings to be cheerful at all times. Indeed, we are so constituted that it seems as though we must have something to be wretched about. If our actual circumstances do not admit of this consummation, then our life is a world of imaginary evils, and we weep as though we had real sorrow. Instead of taking a bright and cheering view we seem never to be quite happy unless we have an opportunity to put an "if" or a "but" in somewhere. We always keep an eye out for a storm cloud, and make ourselves unhappy over the possibility of its coming, whether it ever actually comes or not. We once heard of fails in its first and highest duty to an invalid who insisted to his doctor that he was certainly growing weaker every day, and that the end was not far off. "Why, Doctor," he said one day, in querulous tones, "a month ago I could walk round the park yonder, and to-day I was so weak that I could only walk half round and then back again." If he had

South African Diamonds. The produce of the South African mines is enormous, and the quality of the stones, which is frequently marred by a somewhat tawny complexion, is reported to be improving. Indeed, a twin "drop" from the Vaal River, skillfully mounted by Mr. Streeter, was declared by experts to be of Indian extraction. Vast profits have, of course, been realized. One gentleman's "claim" is said to have cleared in two years £45,000. The New Rush Mine alone yields, £3,000 a day. In 1875, when the diggers had been at work only four years, gems to the value in my district, several road overof £3,500,000 had been extracted from it. The packets of diamonds sent by postbag from Kimberley to Cape Town in 1876 weighed 773 pounds, and were worth £1,414,500. Nor does there seem to be any present prospect of the supply coming to an end. On the contrary there is every reason to believe that only ons regions of South Africa has yet been explored.-Fraser's Magazine.

Yankee Shrewdness.

Sitting on a piazza overlooking Buzzard's Bay the other afternoon, the landlord told the following story of Yankee cuteness: "When I kept a country store," said mine host, "an old farmer came in one day to make a butter trade. He had a lot of fresh butter and I asked him how much he wanted a pound for it. 'Fourteen cents,' he answered. 'Well, I'll take it just as it stands,' was my reply, and he put it down cellar without urther comment. He then ordered a lot of goods-flour, sugar, and so forth, that he wanted to take home with him and asked me how much they would come to. I figured up and found that they amounted to about $2 more than the price of the butter. This seemed to an- lic spirit for roads. I told him a trifle over what he owed me, 'Wall, then,' answered he, as he put the groceries into his wagon, Treck'n we'll have to call it a square trade."

Carelessness in Ordering Goods,

Mistakes frequently occur because o the careless way many merchants have o ordering goods. Some forget to state the number, quality, size, shape or colo of the articles desired, and where price i a necessary element of description they omit to mention that. Such bayers somehow, seem to have the impression that the jobber knows all about his want and will send the right goods, no matte how careless may be his method of or dering. The blame for the uncertaint and mistakes which naturally grow o of the careless ordering by the merch balongs to bim, yet, when the wrong goods come to hand he feels disposed t find fault with the jobber. If a man we to draw up an ordinary contract relative to a business matter, he would think that great care and circumspection were necessary. What is an order but a contract for so many goods? If the purchas was to frame an agreement for a wood lo worth $100, he would use the strictes care to see that the boundaries mentione and that the correct price was inserted and all the conditions of the agreement set forth. A man ordinarily knows just what he wishes to order. He usuall knowns the number of the article, if it i numbered. He can tell whose make it is, and give such other intelligent d scription as will give the wholesale house from whom he orders, the necessary in formation to enable them to send such goods and such only as he desires. Mer shants often omit to take a copy of their orders, a thing they should by all means do. This enables them to know who engagements they have out and prevents plicating their orders. Besides, it i the surplus goods. If it is worth while to send an order at all, it certainly is worth one's while to see that it is properly made. The practice of careless ordering is much more prevalent than most persons suppose. No doubt a great deal of the carclessness arises from the rush and confusion of trade, some of it from over confidence in the integrity of the jobber, and not a little from pure laziness. It is easier to set down and run off an order, than to take the pains of looking up catalogues for names and designations. But these gentlemen find that their ease is purchased at the expense of paying freight charges on the goods that have to be returned because of such carelessness. It certainly is better to use the utmost care in giving orders for goods and avoid the delays, inconveniences and mistakes which arise from the lax method so frequently employed.—Chicago Commercial Adver-

An Ingenious Egg Punch.

Of the nutritious qualities of the freshlaid egg much has been said, all, howing far ahort of the praise which it fairly deserves. Yet how to tell when an egg is fresh is a difficulty which has puzzled the wisest of earth's sages. Happily for oft-deceived humanity, an ns American has come to the front, and by a simple invention has, like a second Columbus, solved the great egg problem. According to the Bridgeport News, an india-rubber stamp, fitted with a moveable dial, is arranged in the nest disc is so fixed that as the foot touches it | "cease firing." the stamp turns over on the ink-pad, and, revolving, marks the date upon the egg. Then the hen departs and the next is emptied, the date of the stamp being altered every day. Now, all this is very ingenious and pretty; but the one fault the world will find with it is, we fear, fatal. The farmer may be certain in his own mind from the moment he adopts the invention of the precise age of every egg he sells, and yet the buyer would not be so absolutely convinced. There have been instances in history of even farmers falsifying dates. What if the agriculturalist, in a jocular moment postdated his egg-register, and sold for new laid eggs those which had been laid a month previously?

ATTENTION, LANDOWNERS

AM about to prepare a special and complete list of all the lands I have for sale, to be printed and circulated at the North. I have established such communication as enables me to place them directly in the hands of the men who desire to move south. I have already made several sales and am continually besieged with inquiries for this and that kind of farm, to buy or lease. Myspecial list is to be prepared and printed at once, and those who desire to have their lands brought before the eyes of the men who want to buy, had better give me power of attorney at once. Call without delay. I confidently expect many of these men to buy farms here this spring if we can suit them, and if I can show them a good list they will come here
